Dear Mr Samaras,

we really hope to close this story with Mrs Georgouli. It's crazy. It has never happened to us such a complicated and foggy story.

It's more than a year that we exchange with you letters and faxes. It's a joke.

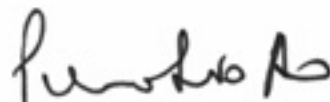

We've never received the signed contract from Mrs Georgouli: we are still asking ourselves how has it been possible for her to stage a play without any contract. She wrote us that she was proving us, with some "allegato" that in italian means "enclosed", that she has failed. We can understand that after a year it's stupid to call something "advanced payment" and it's useless to ask it. We can't understand though, why, if she sold 19 or 24 or 36 tickets for her show, she can't send the percentage due to the author.

At the moment we've spent in mail more, for sure, than the due percentage.

Let's close this story this way, but we ask you not to handle adventures like that any more.

When you will have requests from theatres or companies, ask us a contract, specifying just once the terms of the contract it selfs.

We don't have an office only for Greece, please try to remember it.
